Education Resource

what is streetwise?

Streetwise is a gun, gang and knife crime prevention resource which aims to educate children and young people about the consequences of gun, gang, and knife related cultures. Using a range of interactive mediums such as arts, music, role play, and groupwork, Streetwise aims to demystify the appeal of street crime by challenging young people's attitudes and beliefs, and explores real life issues.

Streetwise works in innovative ways with young people to develop their self-esteem and confidence and enabling them to resist gang, gun and knife culture. Streetwise is one way of reaching out to young people in gangs or at risk of joining a gang and helping them to make positive decisions that will prevent them from harm. Young people are encouraged to take responsibility for their actions and make constructive decisions affecting their lives.

who is it for?

Streetwise is aimed at children and young people aged 10 to 18.

Streetwise can be used in a variety of settings including schools, as part of citizenship programmes, in community centres, youth services, youth offending teams, children homes, law enforcement agencies, prisons and many other public and private social care services and organisations.

This innovative resource is powerful engagement tool for practitioners working with children and young people.

theories used

Groupwork is one of the main theories used in this resource with a view to enable children and young people to reflect on their own behaviours. The benefits of groupwork can have a positive impact on young people. Cognitive behavioural theories are also considered in this resource. It is a relationship between thinking and actions and helping people to change. Streetwise will help young people to consider other opinions, be aware of their emotions and study their behaviour as a result of thoughts and feelings.

Using a Solution focused approach Streetwise explores issues of anger management and effective decision making.

Feminist theories are acknowledged in Streetwise as they can especially relate to girl gangs. Streetwise aims to address oppression which women experience through gang involvement, thus explaining reasons for girl only gangs where they can gain control and autonomy. In a mixed gang with males girls are oppressed and used, males would dominate all decisions. Girls are given the opportunity to speak out and feel that they are worthy to be heard and listened to therefore giving them an increased level of self- respect.

Task centred work has a place in Streetwise, it allows the group to agree that they will look at problems and then agree ways in which they can solve them. By completing various tasks within each unit the students will demonstrate their willingness to make changes in their life.

Mind mapping theories are used throughout the Streetwise programme. Pioneered by Tony Buzan Mind mapping is a powerful technique allowing children and young people to make the best use of their brain power. Mind mapping (or brain training) involves writing down a central idea and thinking up new and related ideas which stem out from the centre. Mind mapping is an important technique that improves the way the human brain stores information. It provides a structure which encourages children and young people to creative problem solving, and enables them to hold information in a format which their minds will find easy to remember and review.
